PRIZE FOUNDATION

The Nobel Committee of the Norwegian Parliament (Nobel Peace Prize) and the Norwegian Nobel Institute

The Nobel Committee of the Norwegian Parliament is, in accordance with the will of the Swedish engineer and inventor, Dr. ALFRED NOBEL, drawn up on September 27th, 1895, entrusted with the distribution of one of the five prizes instituted in the will, viz., the Nobel Peace Prize.

The Storting accepted the task imposed upon it on April 26th, 1897, and shortly after, elected the five members of the Committee. Members are elected for six years and retiring members may be re-elected. Three substitutes are elected every three years.

According to the Code of Statutes of the Nobel Foundation and the Special Regulations concerning the Peace Prize, candidates must be proposed in writing before February 1st of each year by a duly qualified person. Any of the following persons are held to be duly qualified to present candidates:

1. Members and late members of the Nobel Committee of the Norwegian Parliament as well as the advisers appointed by the Norwegian Nobel Institute.
2. Members of Parliaments and Governments of the various states, as well as members of the Inter-parliamentary Union.
3. Members of the International Arbitration Court at The Hague.
4. Members and associates of the Institut de Droit International.
5. University Professors of Political Science and of Law, of History and Philosophy.
6. Persons who have received the Nobel Peace Prize.

Direct personal applications for the Peace Prize are not considered. Every written work, to qualify for the Prize, must have appeared in print.

The Prize can also be awarded to Institutions and Associations and may be divided equally between two candidates.

No work may be awarded a prize unless it has been proved by the test of experience or by the examination of experts to possess the pre-eminent excellence indicated by the terms of Dr. Nobel's will. If it is deemed that none of the works attains the required standard of excellence, the Prize shall be withheld until the ensuing year. Should it even then be found impossible to make any award, the amount of the Prize shall be added to the Main Fund of the Nobel Foundation, unless four members at least determine that two-thirds of the amount shall be set aside for a Special Fund of the Peace Prize Committee.

The Prize is distributed on the anniversary of the death of Dr. Nobel, the 10th of December. The award may, however, be made known before that date. On December 10th the prize winner (or winners) receives the amount of the Prize together with a diploma designed by the Norwegian artist, GERHARD MUNTHE, and a gold medal made by the Norwegian sculptor, GUSTAV VIGELAND. The first award of the Nobel Peace Prize was in 1901.

Sixteen prizes have not been distributed, and two-thirds of the amount of some of the prizes has been set aside for a Special Fund of the Peace Prize Committee mentioned above. This Fund amounted in 1963 to 2,401,234.81 (Swedish) Kr. According to the Statute of the Nobel Foundation the proceeds of the Fund can be employed to support international Peace efforts. The amount of the Nobel Peace Prize in 1961 was 250,232.88 (Swedish) Kr.

The members of the Nobel Committee of the Norwegian Parliament are as follows:

G. JAHN (Chair.), G. NATVIG PEDERSEN (Deputy Chair.), C. J. HAMBRO, M. TRANMAEL, Å. LIONAES.

General Secretary of the Committee, A. SCHOU, Director of the Norwegian Nobel Institute.

To assist in the investigations necessary for making the award, and for the promotion in other ways of the aims of the Nobel Foundation, the adjudicators of the various Nobel Prizes possess powers to establish scientific institutions, under the name of Nobel Institutes.

The Peace Prize Committee established the Norwegian Nobel Institute at Oslo on November 30th, 1903. The object of the institute is to follow the development of international relations, especially to work for the pacific settlement of them, and thereby to advise the Committee with regard to the distribution of the Prize. The Institute publishes a series of scientific treatises: Publications de l'Institut Nobel norvégien.

To the Institute are attached Advisers on international law, modern history and economics, appointed for a period of three years. Those serving at present are: KAARE D. TÖNNESSON for history, TORKEL OPSAHL for international law, PREBEN MUNTHE for economics. The Advisers, in collaboration with the Director of the Institute, deliver to the Nobel Committee confidential reports on the candidates for the Peace Prize. To the Institute is attached a library containing 72,000 vols. on the peace movement, international law, history, and political economy.

The Director of the Institute is AUGUST SCHOU.

The Institute has its separate quarters at 19 Drammensveien, Oslo.

In 1134 the Maestrescuela or Head of the Ecclesiastical School of Salamanca Cathedral, Bishop Berengario, conducted studies in the Cathedral Cloisters, which became the Estudio General of Salamanca when the educational plan of Alfonso IX took shape between 1218 and 1226. The foundation was confirmed by Alfonso's son, Fernando III el Santo, in 1243, and later by Papal Bulls. The School was named a University by Alfonso X el Sabio in the beginning of his reign, and was granted funds. It was reorganised in 1416 by Pope Benedict XIII. The University had ceased to function by the end of the 18th century, but was restored to its former activities in 1940 by Pope Pius XII.

NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES—NATIONAL RESEARCH COUNCIL

2101 Constitution Avenue, Washington 25, D.C.

The National Academy of Sciences—National Research Council is a private non-profit-making organisation dedicated to the advancement of science and to its use for the general welfare.

The Academy itself was established in 1863 by Congressional charter and required to provide for all activities appropriate to an academy of science and to act as an adviser to the government. Membership (currently over 650) is by election only and is in recognition of research accomplishments. The National Research Council was established by the Academy in 1916. Its members (currently about 285) receive their appointments from the President of the Academy and include nominees of the major scientific and technical societies, representatives of the government and a number of members-at-large.

In addition, more than 3,000 of the foremost scientists and technologists of the country co-operate in the work of the Academy-Research Council, without financial compensation, through service on its many boards and committees in the eight Divisions of the Academy-Research Council—Behavioural Sciences, Biology and Agriculture, Chemistry and Chemical Technology, Earth Sciences, Engineering and Industrial Research, Mathematics, Medical Sciences, and Physical Sciences. Also in the Academy-Research Council are three Offices established to deal with matters affecting all the natural sciences—Office of Scientific Personnel, Office of Foreign Secretary, and the Office of Documentation.
